The need to prepare – reducing the effects of disasters

Why use this activity?
If community members think disasters are entirely out of their control (e.g., sent by God), this activity can help them understand that there are actions they can take to reduce the effects of disasters.

A brief description
This activity uses a sketch and discussion questions to help people understand that we can reduce some of the causes of disaster and that we can often do a lot to prepare for disasters.

You will need
An empty cardboard box and a chair.

Explaining the words we use
Hazard – an extreme event which could injure people or damage property and the environment
Vulnerability – how much people are likely to suffer serious loss, damage, injury or death as a result of a hazard
Disaster – a disaster occurs when a hazard affects vulnerable people who are unable to cope with its impacts

What to do
Before you start the activity, find a volunteer to help you. Describe to them what will happen and give them the choice as to whether they want to volunteer or not.

In front of the whole group, ask your volunteer to sit on a chair. Explain that you are going to hold a box above this person’s head and that the box is a hazard. Tell them that everyone is to pretend the box is very heavy so this person is vulnerable if it falls. (The box should not be heavy, just pretend that it is.) Explain to the group that if the hazard (the heavy box) is dropped on the vulnerable person, this will be a disaster. Pretend to drop it on their head.
Now ask the group some questions about the ‘falling box disaster’:

Respond to the disaster
- What could the group do to help the person once the box has fallen on him or her? (Allow the group to answer, but if they are struggling, you could suggest answers such as: taking the person to hospital; providing care for them; taking a collection to help them.)

Preparing for the disaster
- What could be done to prepare for the falling box? (Again, allow the group to answer, but if needed you could suggest things such as: wearing a helmet/hard hat; setting up an early warning system to warn the person and community that there is a falling box; preparing medical aid such as first aid boxes, a clinic or a cycle ambulance; setting up a big net to catch the box if it falls; training people in the potential dangers of falling boxes.)

Preventing the disasters
- What could the community do to prevent this disaster? (For example, pushing the box away; cutting the box up into small pieces; replacing the big box with lots of smaller boxes; building a platform to permanently support the box; catching the box or moving the person away to safety).

Next, ask the group about the main disasters they face.
- What disasters affect you and your community? If the group is unable to answer, don’t suggest disasters, but ask the group what things disrupt their lives or cause loss of life.
Refer back to the box illustration to explore what the community can now do to respond to, prepare for, and prevent those disasters.

For each disaster the group has mentioned, ask:
- What causes the disaster?
- How do people’s actions contribute to making the disaster worse? (For example deforestation, conflict, polluting water.)
- How could the community respond to the disaster when it happens?
- How could they prepare for the disaster?
- How could they prevent the disaster?

Once, you have discussed every disaster type the group identified, encourage some discussion on fatalism.

- Do we see disasters as out of our control because we think they are caused by God, or do we see the opportunities God has given us to reduce the impacts of disasters?
